An Attorney on Your Side

It seems like everything, including your average law practice, is growing larger and more impersonal.

But bigger is not always better. Mr. Marks made a decision to run a small practice because he knows that the attorney-client relationship is strengthened by open communication. When you hire Paul Marks, you are going to work individually with the attorney, with critically important face-to-face time, and he will know you by name.

In other words, you and your attorney will be a team. The way it should be.
